Travel, Enjoy, Respect: The Way of the Responsible Global Citizen

This year, the United Nations has designated 2017 as the year of “International Year of Sustainable Tourism for Development.” But what does that really mean?

In short, that means that we have to be responsible global citizens when we travel abroad for vacation. It’s actually easy to do if we follow these steps: Travel, Enjoy, and Respect.

Of course, the first thing to do about sustainable tourism is to travel! Traveling to other places and cultures is far better than simply reading about it on a website. Plus, you can get real experiences that will last a lifetime.

The second thing we can do is to enjoy the places we travel to. This part seems a little obvious, but travel should be enjoyable. Of course, we need to be mindful that our enjoyment also helps the places we visit. In the modern internet world, we can spread out experiences of enjoyment through social media. This should help tourism create more money and jobs for the local people.

Lastly, we should always have respect for the places we visit. That way, we can preserve and protect our travel destinations for future generations.
